Departmental Showcase:

Academic Advising

Ever wonder what academic advisors do when students leave campus for summer?

Advisors at the Academic Advising Center have one of their busiest seasons in the summer onboarding our entering students for fall registration. From June 2 – July 18, AAC advisors are meeting one-on-one via Zoom with new first-year and transfer students every day. AAC advisors advise approximately 72-76% of the entering class each year. That's over 4,600 students! Advisors and each student have a 45-minute appointment where they get acquainted, learn about students' interests, and help them register for their first-semester schedule. It's rewarding to share the moment when a student registers and officially becomes an Iowa Hawkeye!

During the academic year, AAC advisors advise:

- First-year students with a declared major in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences
- Open Majors
- Students who plan to apply to one of our undergraduate colleges – Nursing, Business, Engineering, Medicine, Pharmacy, and Public Health
- Pre-Health and Pre-Law students
- Students in Enterprise Leadership and Interdepartmental Studies to graduation

The AAC has over 40,000 student appointments during the academic year, the vast majority of which are held in person at the Center on the second floor of the Pomerantz Center.

Curious to learn more about how the AAC supports undergraduate student success? Check out the AAC's most recent annual report on our website and follow us on Instagram – ui_aac!
