Program: CRSD: Counselor Education and Supervision Ph.D. Program
Rating: High Quality

The PhD program in Counselor Education and Supervision is a strong program which has an excellent national reputation fostered by its diverse student body, strong recruitment and selection practices, and good financial support for students that emanates from strong faculty research. The PhD program has good TTD and completion rates, and graduates appear to seek and obtain appropriate placements in other counselor education programs (62% in tenure track positions) and counseling services providers. The Counselor Education program was ranked 12th in 2009 by US News and World Reports.

Program: CRSD: School Counseling M.A. Program
Rating: High Quality

Students interested in the accredited School Counseling MA degree are largely practitioners at various levels of education. Selectivity therefore is modest, diversity is acceptable. For an MA program there appears to be strong interest in the degree and outcomes are acceptable and appropriate. It is the first school counseling program in the nation to provide an additional programmatic emphasis on counseling gifted students and has been recognized regionally for “most innovative counselor education program.” The need for trained school counselors is high nationwide and graduates from this program are highly sought after by public schools and counseling services providers.